The Dream of the Phoenix

The human soul is limitless in its quest- for the known and the unknown. It has an insatiable urge to wander wherever it can and gather as much as it can; much like the Phoenix and its desire to celebrate life and attain immortality. There never is an end to the Phoenix and similarly, its dreams are boundless. The human soul and the Phoenix - bedfellows in more ways than one, in dreams and in reality.

Our dreams liberate us, taking us to places never seen, meeting entities that don't exist, experiencing the richness of life. They define our thoughts and give reason to reality.

Dreams unite us with time and space. Life is infinite and dreams enable us to scale this infinity. The rigidity surrounding reality is dissolved in our thoughts; dreams are an unending answer to our restricting questions.

These paintings are an attempt to essay the soul's great energy. Reveling in the glory of life, with its collective essence of the known and unknown, the soul enthrones itself within the very core of our being. The Dream of the Phoenix is in expressing an abstract function and universalizing personal experiences in order to put forth for the viewer a sensitive and emotional space which is replete with childhood wonders and recollections.

And so, The Dream of the Phoenix is the dream we all see, an endeavour to comprehend and thus, realize the meaning of our life.

Welcome to the Dream !!!
